

KDBIO Company Privacy Policy

This privacy policy applies to information that KDBIO S.A.S. collects through its website kdbio.com.

1. Collection of Information

A. Information provided by you

We may obtain information from you directly via our web forms including email address, first name, last name, phone number and any details concerning your technical interests that you may provide to us. KDBIO will retain and use this information for business purposes.

B. Information collected automatically

KDBIO does not automatically collect information indicating how individual users interact with its website. We do not automatically collect information concerning the webpages that you choose to consult.

2. Use of information

Information provided by you to KDBIO via the website forms or by other means, verbal or written, will only ever be used for legitimate business purposes. This information may be collected and stored by third parties such as Mailchimp to facilitate the provision of information that is relevant to the interests you communicate to us via the kdbio.com website. It is easy to unsubscribe permanently from such messages. We may use certain third-party web analytics services, such as Google Analytics, as a means to better understand, on an aggregated basis, how visitors use our website.

3. Disclosure of information

KDBIO may share information you provide to us via our web forms with its business partners, such as product suppliers or distributors, for business purposes only. Any information marked "confidential" will not be shared outside the company KDBIO without your permission.

4. Modification or deletion of information

By using the unsubscribe function at the footer of our emailings you remove your email from any further emailings unless you choose to re-subscribe at a later date. Information provided by you in preceding interactions may remain stored with us but will be permanently deleted on receipt of a direct request sent to info@kdbio.com
